WILMINGTON, North Carolina's Port City, has been transformed into one of the most active defense centers of the country, with the establishment nearby of Camp Davis, the home of the Anti-Aircraft Artillery School. The North Carolina Ship-Building Company is also located here and operates a nine-way yard for the building of steel cargo ships for the Government and employs in excess of 6,000 workers. Front Street is the principal business thoroughfare and represents a scene of commercial activity at all times.
